“I’m looking forward to exchanging ideas with other states’ legislators on issues that are important to northeastern Connecticut and the entire state,” said Rep. Caron. “This is the first time I am attending, and I hope to discuss issues from energy to climate change to state tax policy at a time of budget surpluses.”

Legislators from all 50 states and from around the world will attend more than 200 NCSL policy sessions on pressing state policy issues including:

- Real ID: Sticker Shock Over Driver’s Licenses
- The Heat Is On: States Take on Climate Change

- State Health Reform: A Universal Approach
- Fit or Flabby? Fresh or Fatty? School Wellness Legislation
- Exotic Mortgages

The 2007 Legislative Summit also is the venue for state lawmakers to affect policy in the nation’s capital. NCSL’s 11 Standing Committees will debate and vote on policy positions that will guide the organization’s advocacy on state legislatures’ behalf in Washington, D.C.
