Marilyn Giuliano Supports Alternative Budget That Cuts Gas Tax, Eliminates Small Business Tax and Offers Early Retirements to Streamline Government

State Rep. Marilyn Giuliano, R-23rd District, supports an alternative state budget to provide relief to Connecticut citizens and control spending in the face of shrinking revenue.

The alternative Republican budget offered today would cut state gas taxes, eliminate a business tax and balance by offering thousands of state employees an early retirement plan that will reduce spending by $163 million next year, according to the non-partisan Office of Fiscal Analysis.

Rep. Giuliano said, “Knowing clearly what lies ahead, it is our responsibility to make sure our state budget reflects those realities.”

She added, “We can’t just go home and pretend that the national economic slowdown doesn’t exist. I think it is vital that we adopt a realistic, sustainable budget that provides some relief to Connecticut citizens.”

With just 10 days remaining in the legislative session House and Senate Republicans put forth a balanced tax and spending plan that will not raise taxes, streamlines government and will avoid potentially huge budget deficits in the coming years.

The Republican alternative:

- Cuts gas prices by 10 cents through a summer state tax moratorium and a roll back the scheduled petroleum gross receipts tax increase of .5 percent on July 1. Those roll backs will save consumers $50 million.
- Eliminates the $250 Business Entity Tax that all businesses pay just for opening their doors over two years to save $35 million ($17.5 million in the first year)
- Phases out of the so-called Death Tax cliff that will save estates $24 million and help keep more people in Connecticut ($12 million in the first year).
- Offers up to 11,600 eligible state workers an early retirement incentive program, or ERIP, to save a projected $163 million in the next fiscal year.

“We have been working on alternative budgets for some time but based on the recent alarming revenue deficits, we felt we had to provide both fiscal restraint and relief for businesses and at the gas pump,” Rep. Giuliano said. “Now is not the time to sit back and ‘do nothing’ when we are all aware of the potential deficits that lie ahead. We realize that this is an election year, but we must make some clear, tough decisions now that will benefit all of Connecticut and not wait until after the campaign is over.”

The ERIP offered in 2003, in the midst of the last state fiscal crisis, saw more than 4,000 workers retire and cut the state payroll by more than $155 million. Republicans stresses that no state worker would lose his or her job because of the ERIP.

Rep. Marilyn Giuliano serves the 23rd assembly district of Old Lyme, Lyme, Old Saybrook and Westbrook in the state House of Representatives.
